

Francis Frimpong

Dr Francis Boateng Frimpong is a senior lecturer and an associate MBA director at the Royal Docks School of Business and Law, University of East London, UK. His research interests include Neoliberalism and Financialisation, Poverty Alleviation, the Political Economy of Africa, Big Data and Data Analytics. Francis is the author of Financialisation and Poverty Alleviation in Ghana: Myths and Realities. His book chapter (The Unintended Consequences of African Union Sanctions of Member States) has been published in the Routledge Handbook on the Political Economy of Sanctions.

Francis acquired his PhD in Economics from the University of East London and gained a Certificate in Real Estate Economics and Finance from the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). He is a Certified Management and Business Educator (CMBE) and a fellow of the Higher Education Academy (FHEA), which acknowledges his teaching excellence. Francis is the associate director of the Centre for the Study of States, Markets and People (STAMP), a research centre that promotes advanced and applied research in social sciences. He is a reviewer for the Pan-African Journal of Business and Management.